Your answers must be based on the passage.

"Oh! I'm so lonely. I wish I had a friend," said a strange voice from the corn field. Sitting in his tractor, Farmer Josh looked around the field. He heard the voice clearly but there was no one in the corn field except his wife, Penny. However, it was not Penny's voice. Just as he thought he was imagining things, he heard the voice again.

"Oh! I wish I had a friend. I'm so lonely," the voice called out once more.

"Who is that talking?" Farmer Josh asked. There was no answer. That sent a chill down his spine as he should not be hearing things.

Then, Penny asked, "Were you talking to me, my dear?"

"No, I thought I heard someone talking to me out here," answered Farmer Josh.

"You must be hearing things," said Penny. "I did not hear anything. The only ones out here are you, that silly old scarecrow and me," she added.

"Are you calling me silly?" asked that same voice. Farmer Josh looked at Penny and she looked at him. Then, they looked at the scarecrow.

"Oh, no, the scarecrow is talking!" Farmer Josh screamed in disbelief.

"This should not be happening. Scarecrows cannot talk," said Penny.

"Well, it's about time for all scarecrows to start talking. Do you know how lonely I am? I bet every scarecrow feels the same way as I do," said the scarecrow. Just then, a group of farmers from the neighbourhood showed up at Farmer Josh's farm. They came to tell him that their scarecrows were complaining about being lonely too.

All the farmers gathered and discussed the problem. Finally, they decided to make each of their scarecrows a partner. Their wives helped them out. From then on, the scarecrows were much happier in the fields as they were no longer lonely.
