SECTION C: COMPREHENSION (10 MARKS)

Read the passage carefully and answer the questions 13 to 17.

Lighthouses all over the world, guide ships safely to shore. In darkness and in fogs, they warn of dangerous rocks and reefs. They can also be landmarks which some ships use to find their way along the coast. Nowadays, most lighthouses are lighted by electricity. Sometimes, keepers are needed to look after the lighthouses. Sometimes, the lighthouses run by themselves.

5

At the top of the lighthouse is a lantern. This is the most important part of the light house. The light inside the lantern is enclosed in a giant glass lens. The lens turns around the light. Prisms on the lens bend lights' rays into a single blazing beam.

10

Sailors know a lighthouse by its size and shape. At night, they recognise it by its beacon or light. Some beacons show a fixed steady light. Usually, the beacons emit white lighting but it can also be coloured. Other lighthouses flash their light according to a special pattern. A flashing pattern has periods of dark and light. In some patterns, the periods of dark are longer. In others, the periods of light are longer.

15

Before electricity was invented, kerosene was used as a fuel in lighthouse lamps. It produced a bright light but it was a dirty fuel. The smoky lamps had to be cleaned every day and the wicks had to be trimmed to prevent them from bursting into flames.

20

There are many fascinating stories about lighthouses. Take the lighthouse called Portland Head Light, for instance. One wintry night in 1864, there was a very heavy fog. A ship with people from Ireland to America crashed into a huge rock in the sea. The lighthouse could not be seen due to the heavy fog. The passengers got into lifeboats and many were saved. One person who was saved that night was a boy named John F. Fitzgerald who grew up to become the mayor of Boston. His grandson, John Fitzgerald Kennedy, became the thirty-fifth president of the United States.

SECTION H: COMPREHENSION (10 MARKS)

Read the passage carefully and answer questions 39 to 43. Write your answers in complete sentences.

Guided by the rays of sunlight, we walked through the dense forest, thrashing our way through with a *parang. As we worked on, a trail slowly emerged. We were very exhausted, our food and water supply were diminishing. We had been walking aimlessly for a day hoping to find our way out of the place. Our classmates would probably laugh if they knew what had happened to the so-called "Famous Five". We were labelled that as we were known to be adventurous, just like the characters of the book. 5

"Hey guys, let's just stop for a while to rest, shall we?" May requested.

"I agree with her whole-heartedly," panted Bala.

"If I know that we are going to be in this sorry state, I would rather spend the holidays at home watching television than doing this," James complained while nursing the scratches on his arms and legs. 10

All of us were not experienced trekkers so that showed how foolish we had been. We should have made sure that we had all the necessary equipment for the trek. We had forgotten to bring along a compass. The outdated map was of little use either. They were grateful they had the *parang as it was the most useful. While resting, Sam came up with a great idea and that was to look for a stream that would lead us downhill. However, the journey could be rough and we might get hurt. Then again, we had to take the risk, as there was no better alternative. 15 20

"Shh...listen, can you hear that?" Bala muttered.

In a flash, all of us dashed towards the source of the sound. There, about fifty metres away, we saw a stream, our saviour! We tracked along the path downstream but it was not a simple task as the ground was very damp and slippery. Our legs bled as we walked through thorny bushes and we had to hang onto roots and stems for support as we climbed downhill. 25

Suddenly, we heard voices ahead of us. Our pace doubled and our hearts were thumping as we approached the voices. Our anxiety was replaced by tears of relief and joy.

* A long blade
