The Arctic Fox

The Arctic Fox is a small fox found commonly in the Arctic. It is a little less than one metre long. This fox is brown in the warm summer season and white in the cold winter. Its thick fur coat helps insulate it from the freezing temperatures and snow.

The Arctic Fox is the ultimate survivor. It eats anything including insects, small mammals, birds, ducks, geese, eggs, and even an occasional Snowy Owl. Lemmings, small mouse-like mammals, are its most common prey. Arctic foxes will eat berries and seaweed as well. When food is scarce, they become scavengers, feeding on dead animals. While they hunt for food, Arctic Foxes are preyed upon by polar bears.

Both male and female foxes help to take care of the young. While the Arctic Fox is common throughout the Arctic, it is quite rare in Norway, Sweden, and Finland. Its population never recovered from severe overhunting. In addition, global warming has caused the movement of the Red Fox into the Arctic Fox's territory, threatening the Arctic Fox's population.

"Who are you emailing, Isabel?" her older brother, Dylan, asked.

"Well, if you must know, I'm thanking Uncle Max for my birthday present," Isabel replied in an exasperated tone.

"Oh, this weird clock on your dressing table," said Dylan.

Isabel turned around sharply in her chair and told Dylan not to touch it but he ignored her and grabbed the clock. It was bright green, with three buttons on top – black, purple and yellow. 5

"What are these buttons for?" Dylan asked suspiciously.

"Don't touch them or you'll be sorry!" Isabel snapped.

Dylan pressed the yellow button. The clock began to tick slowly. Suddenly Dylan shuddered and started to move and talk in slow motion. Isabel grabbed the clock and Dylan immediately began behaving normally again. He turned to Isabel with a bewildered look on his face. 10

"Would you like to try the purple button next?" suggested Isabel with a sly smile on her face. 15

Dylan was defiant despite the unpleasant experience of not being able to control his body. He also did not want Isabel to laugh at him if he did not take up her suggestion. He pressed the purple button and froze immediately. Isabel swung her chair around to face the computer. She added the following words to her email. 20

"Oh, thank you for a most useful birthday present. Everything worked just as we had planned. This should teach Dylan not to be nosy." Isabel clicked 'send' and stood up to release Dylan from his frozen pose.

"You haven't pressed the last button yet, Dylan. But I am warning you that if you do, you will end up living amongst some dinosaurs," teased Isabel. Dylan shuddered in fear at the thought of being with the dinosaurs. 25
