As I got into the car, I became (21) depressed. I did not believe that we were actually moving. Dad was offered an extremely good job in Singapore. Although Mum had been constantly upbeat about our move, I knew that it was (22) merely a mask for the benefit of Brian, my three-year-old brother and myself.

We were simply exhausted by the time we arrived that night. Therefore, when the door bell rang the next morning, we groaned as no one was in the mood for visitors. (23) Wondering who it could be, I opened the door and immediately, a loud merry voice boomed, "Hi! You must be our new neighbours. We're the Tans. We brought you some cakes that we have just baked."

Section F: Comprehension MCO (5 marks)

Read the passage below and answer questions 26 to 30.

Stacy was tired of moving every couple of years because of her mother's army career. On the other hand, her brother, Tom, loved new places. Stacy felt that moving often was enough to dishearten anyone. Stacy wanted to feel that she belonged, but it was always a challenge.

It was hard to move in junior high, but moving in high school was even harder. Everyone had picked out a group of friends to hang out with by high school. Stacy tried to speculate about which group she could be in but found that she was never in one place long enough to be anything except an outsider.

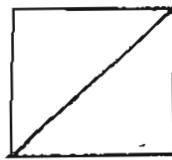

Moving so often had taught Stacy how to quickly set up a new bedroom so it seemed like home. She paid scrupulous attention to the placement of her bed, and then she hung up her favourite posters. After setting up her room, Stacy's next step in "Project Integration" was to go check out the school, and if possible, analyze the social scene. She especially studied whether the girls wore makeup and what kinds of jeans they had because every detail was relevant. Stacy would itemize each observation on a list for shopping purposes. She even studied the student roster to see how many kids were in her grade.

On the first morning of school, Stacy tried to feel optimistic, like Tom. She put on her new clothes and then took her engraved shark's tooth necklace from Hawaii and put it around her neck. It was supposed to bring good luck and Stacy wore it everywhere, even if it looked clumsy. Stacy tucked it into her new wool sweater so it was not conspicuous.

"Let's go! It's another first day at school!" teased Tom who never seemed to care about fitting in. As a result, he was outgoing, friendly and immensely popular everywhere he went. Her brother tried to indoctrinate her that it was better to be herself rather than be someone else.

"I guess I'm ready," said Stacy. She felt a sinking sensation permeate her stomach.

26. Why did Stacy's family move so often?
- (1) They were in the real estate business.
 - (2) They liked adventure.
 - (3) Her mother worked in the military.
 - (4) Her brother enjoyed the moving about.
27. Which word has the same meaning as 'scrupulous' in Paragraph 3?
- (1) rigorous
 - (2) careful
 - (3) casual
 - (4) frugal
28. Why did Stacy have this project called 'Project Integration'?
- (1) It was a project given to her every time she went to a new school.
 - (2) She wanted to show her new friends how capable she was.
 - (3) She wanted to be accepted by the friends in the new school.
 - (4) She wanted to know her new friends very well.
29. Why did Stacy have a sinking sensation permeating her stomach?
- (1) She was nervous to make new friends.
 - (2) She was having a stomach upset.
 - (3) She wanted to show her brother she was more well-liked than he.
 - (4) She was ready to embark on the journey in the new school.
30. What message do you think the author was trying to convey in this story?
- (1) Moving house is detrimental to youths.
 - (2) Get a good luck charm.
 - (3) Be yourself.
 - (4) A brother can be helpful.

Section K: Comprehension OE (10 x 2 marks)

Read the passage carefully and then answer questions 71 to 80.

ALL ANSWERS MUST BE IN COMPLETE SENTENCES.

As Andrea turned off the motorway onto the road to Brockbourne, the small village in which she lived, it was four o'clock in the afternoon. Andrea shivered. It was cold. It was another ten miles to the cottage where she lived with her husband Michael and she felt a little lonely. She would have liked to listen to the radio but it had been stolen from her car when it was parked outside her office in London about two weeks ago, and she had not got around to replacing it yet. 5

She was just coming out of the little village of Mickley when she saw the old lady, standing by the road, with a crude hand-written sign saying "Brockbourne" in her hand. Andrea was surprised. She had never seen an old lady hitchhiking before. However, the weather and the coming darkness made her feel sorry for the lady, waiting hopefully on a country road like this with little traffic. Normally, Andrea would never pick up a hitchhiker when she was alone, 10 thinking it was too dangerous, but what was the harm in doing a favour for an old lady like this? Andrea pulled up a little way down the road and the lady, holding a big shopping bag, hurried over to climb into the car through the door which Andrea had opened for her.

When she got in, Andrea could see that she was broad and fat and had some difficulty climbing in through the car door with her big bag. She wore a long, shabby old dress and she 15 had a yellow hat pulled down low over her eyes. Panting noisily from her effort, she pushed her big brown canvas shopping bag down onto the floor under her feet and said in a whisper, "Thank you, dear. I'm just going to Brockbourne."

"Do you live there?" asked Andrea, thinking that she had never seen the old lady in the village in the four years she had lived there. 20

"No, dear," answered the passenger in her soft voice, "I'm just going to visit a friend. He was supposed to meet me back there at Mickley but his car won't start, so I decided to hitchhike. There isn't a bus until seven and I didn't want to wait. I knew some kind soul would give me a lift."

Something in the way the lady spoke and the way she never turned her head, but stared 25 continuously into the darkness ahead from under her old yellow hat, made Andrea feel uneasy.

She did not know why but she felt instinctively that there was something wrong, something odd, something...dangerous. But how could an old lady be dangerous? It was absurd.

Careful not to turn her head, Andrea looked sideways at her passenger. She studied the hat, the dirty collar of the dress, the shapeless body and the arms with their thick black hairs... 30

Thick black hairs? Hairy arms? Andrea's blood froze. This wasn't a woman. It was a man. At first, she didn't know what to do. Then suddenly, an idea came into her racing, terrified brain. Swinging the wheel suddenly, she threw the car into a skid and brought it to a halt.

"My God!" she shouted, "A child! Did you see the child? I think I hit her!"

The "old lady" was clearly shaken by the sudden skid. "I didn't see anything, dear," she said. "I don't think you hit anything." 35

"I'm sure it was a child!" insisted Andrea. "Could you just get out and have a look? Just see if there's anything on the road?" She held her breath. Would her plan work?

It did. The passenger slowly opened the car door, leaving her bag inside, and climbed out to investigate. As soon as she was out of the vehicle, Andrea accelerated madly away. 40

It was only when she was safe did she think about the bag lying on the floor. Maybe the bag would provide some information about the real identity of the old lady. Andrea lifted the heavy bag onto her lap and opened it curiously.

It contained only one item -- a small hand axe with a razor-sharp blade. The axe and the inside of the bag were covered with the dark red stains of dried blood. 45

Andrea began to scream.
