A few years ago, I organized the Kick Drugs Out of America Foundation. It is an organization (21) designed to work with high-risk children. The idea is to teach kids martial arts, to help raise their (22) self-esteem and instill discipline and respect for themselves and others. Many of the kids, boys as well as girls, come from broken homes and are having trouble in school and in their lives in general. I'm pleased to say that the program has been working (23) phenomenally well. Many young people quickly (24) adapt to the philosophy of the martial arts.

After more than thirty-five years in the martial arts, competing and training thousands of young people, there is one story that is (25) engraved in my memory. It was told to me by Alice McCleary, one of my Kick Drugs Out of America Black Belt instructors.

Read the passage below and answer questions 26 to 30

Lights out after the witching hour? Not likely in Singapore, which, a global study on sleep habits found, is a nation of owls.

It found that one in two stay up past midnight, with half (27 per cent) hitting the sack between midnight and 1 am, and the other half turning in after 1 am. Not that this translates into the luxury of sleeping in. 5

Over a third (37 per cent) of the five hundred polled rise between 6am and 7am. Another thirty –one per cent get up between 7am and 8am. Hardly surprising then, that six out of ten Singaporeans don't get the recommended eight hours of shut-eye. The majority (fifty-nine per cent) manage six to seven hours while three per cent survive on only five hours of sleep. 10

The survey was conducted by ACNielsen last October over the Internet. More than fourteen thousand people, aged between sixteen to over sixty, in twenty-eight countries across Asia Pacific, Europe and the United States were polled.

With fifty-four per cent of Singaporeans turning in after midnight, Singapore ranked seventh in the top ten night owls' list. Seven of the places on this list are from Asia, the others are Mediterranean countries – Portugal, Spain and Italy – which are typically known for their mid-day siestas and late night dinners. 15

Said Ms Vicky Santos, executive director for ACNielsen Research Singapore; "The competitive Singaporean society is adapting to a longer 'waking' day as working adults juggle their time between work and family." 20

The growing range of late-night entertainment, such as pubs, karaoke lounges, cinemas, cable television and the Internet, as well as twenty-four hour retail outlets have also pushed back people's bedtimes, added Ms Santos. The earliest to bed in Asia Pacific are the Australians followed by the New Zealanders. Only two per cent of the Singaporeans said that they are in bed by 10 pm. 25

As thirty-one per cent Aussies and twenty-eight per cent Kiwis clock over nine hours of sleep daily, they are the biggest sleepers in the region. The Japanese, however, are the exact opposite, with four out of ten getting six hours or less.

On the honour roll for larks, Indonesia took the top spot with nine in ten out of bed by 7am. The Taiwanese, second on the owl list – are the last out of bed. They usually do not get up until after 9am. The survey also found that globally, people in their twenties tend to be owls. In Asia Pacific, however, those in their thirties are more likely to burn the midnight oil. 30

So what about the recommended eight hours of sleep? Dr Yeo Poh Teck, consultant and director of the Sleep Disorder Centre at Gleneagles Hospital, said that it is not a medical requirement. A union movement in the 1930s in the US and Europe had led to the demand for the 24-hour day to be split equally among work, leisure and sleep. He added that the amount of sleep required varies from one person to another. 35 40

His advice? "Listen to your body. If you feel refreshed when you wake up, and can function well throughout the day, then you have enough sleep. Otherwise, you need more time in bed."

For each question from 26 to 30, four options are given. One of them is the correct answer. Make your choice (1, 2, 3 or 4). Shade the correct oval (1, 2, 3 or 4) on the Optical Answer Sheet. (5 marks)

26. Which one of the following best describes the sleeping habits of Singaporeans?

- (1) We are a nation of larks.
- (2) Most Singaporeans turn in only after midnight.
- (3) Most Singaporeans sleep at least eight hours a day.
- (4) Most Singaporeans love to sleep early at night and are out of bed by 7am.

27. Majority of the people who are "night owls" come primarily from _____.

- (1) Asia
- (2) Europe
- (3) United States
- (4) South America

28. According to the passage, one of the possible reasons for the sleep pattern amongst most Singaporeans is the result of _____.

- (1) people wanting to work less and sleep more
- (2) the growing range of late-night entertainments
- (3) more people thinking that sleep is not important
- (4) people wanting to have their mid-day siestas and late-night dinners

29. How did the eight hours of sleep come about?

- (1) Medical experts recommended it.
- (2) It was a habit that had been passed down through the generations.
- (3) A union movement in the US and Europe in the 1930s pushed for it.
- (4) People found that they felt refreshed only after they had slept for at least eight hours a day.

30. What does Dr Yeo Poh Teck mean when he said, "Listen to your body" in line 41?

Our body _____.

- 4 will tell us when to go to sleep each night
- (2) knows how much sleep is sufficient for us to function
- (3) will make sure that we get eight hours of sleep each day
- (4) will make sure we give equal amount time to work, leisure and sleep

The Straits Times approached 17 construction firms. Five firms refused to comment.

(43)

Most of them cited convenance and efficiency as the reason they continued to use lorry to transport workers.

Mrs Kathleen Pang, 44, an administrative executive of Asia Projects Engineering, said, "Lorries can transport both goods and passengers. They are also sutible for the rough roads under construction sites."

Mr K Kesavan, 50, managing director of Kesavan Engineering and construction, said

(47)

(48)

"It's a safe way to trenspote workers, but only if we are disciplined and drivers watch out for them. Some workers sit in cpurs in the lorry like maharajahs. They simply do not see the danger."

(50)

He said it was not practicle to use buses or vans. The workers can get very dirty and muddy.

Inspector Holmes is investigating the disappearance of a college boy, Tommy Atkins. He suspects two men, Packard and Graves, two excellent actors and dangerous criminals – who, among other things, work the trains, especially at holiday time, getting money from the passengers one way or another. Inspector Holmes works out a plan with his assistant, Westcott, to trap the suspects.

Mr Holmes explained his plan to me quickly. “We board the train separately. Now if, by chance, Packard and Graves appear in your compartment, get up, walk past my compartment and look in, then return to your own. Start a conversation with them about your money, just as Tommy did. If they appear in my compartment, I’ll signal you in the same way, and you come to my compartment. Understood?”

“Right.” I entered the neighbouring compartment and sat down. Before long, Holmes appeared outside my compartment. I got up quickly, went next door and sat down. There was no one there but an elderly couple – an old man asleep in a corner and an old woman sitting next to him reading a book!

As I sat down in the opposite corner, the woman looked up and smiled, then continued to read her book. But what was this? I could have made a mistake and entered the wrong compartment.

I thought of getting up to leave when the woman closed her book and said, “Beautiful winter’s day, isn’t it?”

“Yes it is.”

“Now don’t tell me, my dear. Let me guess. You’re going back to College after the Christmas holidays. Time to work again. Such a pity!”

She laughed a rather strange laugh and said, “Oh, I can always tell a College boy!” She had quite a deep, hearty voice and it woke her husband up. She asked if ~~her~~ <sup>he</sup> had been having pleasant dreams.

“Yes, very pleasant.” He looked at his watch. “Isn’t it time to have some tea?:

“Right you are.” She looked across at me, smiled and asked if I would have a cup with them.

I started to get up. I had to find Holmes. He must have made a mistake and shown me to the wrong compartment. “Thank you, but I ...”

“Now, don’t tell me a nice cup of tea, even out of a thermos, wouldn’t taste good. And I have some delicious biscuits, too. Where are you a student, my dear?”

I told her and watched her pour out the tea and hand it round. Her husband sat up straight in his seat, tasted his tea and asked if I had received a lot of presents at Christmas.

30

“Yes,” I said, “and no.”

“Yes and no?”

“Well, not presents really, only money.”

“There’s nothing wrong with money,” the woman said, adding, “I hope you aren’t carrying it with you. Very dangerous. We actually heard about two men robbing people on the trains during the holidays. Terrible!”

35

“I’m going to put it straight into the bank as soon as we reach London,” I assured her.

“I should hope so. Drink your tea, dear.”

I took a sip, then another. The old woman was quite a talker and went on and on. I found, however, that her voice made me sleepy and I could hardly keep my eyes open. She paid no attention to me but just talked on. The man, however, began to look at me in a very strange way and the last time I remember was him taking the cup from my hand.
