Long ago in Malaysia, a man, who liked orang utans, kept one as a pet. Every morning, the orang utan would jump from tree to tree in the garden. After that, the orang utan had bananas for breakfast.

One morning, the man said to the orang utan, "We have very few bananas left today. I shall give you three bananas in the morning and seven bananas in the evening."

When the orang utan heard that, it became angry. It jumped up to a tree and sat on the branch. It declined the bananas from the man.

Then the man called out to the orang utan, "All right! You shall have seven bananas in the morning and three bananas in the evening."

The orang utan looked at the bananas and thought really hard. Then it came down from the tree quickly. It took the big, yellow bananas from the man and started eating them immediately.
