Read the passage carefully and answer the following questions.

There once lived a poor woman named Shiko, who worshipped the guardian spirit of a shrine daily. She was so devoted that one day, the guardian spirit left a gift for her. It was a small green cap.

To her surprise, she was able to hear and understand what the birds, animals and plants of the forest were saying after putting on the cap. "It is a listening cap!" she exclaimed in exhilaration. 5

Just then, Shiko overheard the conversation between two birds. "Did you hear about the mayor and the maple tree?" asked one bird to the other.

"Yes," said the other bird, "the old town mayor chopped down the maple tree in order to make room for a teahouse in his garden. As a result, the tree's roots are suffering in pain. Infuriated by the extreme pain, the roots had cast a spell that the mayor would die the day they do. That is why the mayor is now on his deathbed." 10

Upon hearing this, Shiko rushed home and disguised herself as a doctor. With the listening cap still on her head, she headed for the mayor's house. Thinking that Shiko was a doctor, the mayor's wife showed her in as she had tried all the known remedies without success. 15

The mayor's wife then promptly informed Shiko that the mayor had fallen ill after building the teahouse in the garden. Shiko immediately went to the teahouse. There she heard the maple tree's roots moaning, "We are in so much pain. We are going to die soon and so will the mayor." 20

Instantly, Shiko rushed to the mayor and advised him to have his teahouse torn down at once so that the maple tree could grow again.

The desperate mayor followed her advice. Within a few days, healthy green shoots were seen growing from the ground and the mayor began to regain his health. 25

For each question, four options are given. One of them is the correct answer. Make your choice (1, 2, 3 or 4). Shade the correct oval (1, 2, 3 or 4) on the Optical Answer Sheet.

"Don't watch too much television Darren. It's not good for you. Let's go and play outside instead. Grandpa will show you how to make your own **chaptah*, alright? Come on," Grandpa coaxed.

Roy watched Grandpa as he tried to persuade his little brother but Darren was too engrossed in his favourite cartoon. Grandpa ~~threw his hands~~ 5 up in despair. Feeling sorry for him, Roy sat beside Grandpa and said, "Grandpa, tell me about those carefree kampong days." Grandpa beamed at him.

He began telling Roy about how he and his friends would play all day long without a care. Armed with catapults made from Y-shaped twigs and a rubber band, they would shoot at waterbirds. Sometimes, they would kill a few and bring them home for their mothers to cook. On other days, they would wade across the swamp to get to the caves beyond the vegetable farm. There, they would frighten the bats and pick fruits from the trees nearby. 10

"Everything tasted so good, no matter how simple it was. The guavas were very sweet and the rambutans juicy," Grandpa recalled longingly.

Curious, Roy asked, "Grandpa, what about school? Didn't you have to study?"

"Oh yes," boomed Grandpa, "school was only a ten-minute walk away 20 from home. My parents, unlike yours, were not very strict. I missed classes just to play with my friends. My parents thought it didn't matter because I was going to be a farmer anyway. So I stopped going to school after Primary Six," sighed Grandpa.

"It is a pity that I stopped since I never did become a farmer. I wish I 25 had studied harder. A good education would have been good for me. Perhaps, I did play too much when I was young," Grandpa said as he shook his head in regret. He patted Roy's head and said, "Learn from my story and study hard, Roy!"
