Raja, Andy, Weiming and Anwar were very excited. They had been waiting impatiently for Mr Lim, their scoutmaster, to arrive. He was taking them and the other scouts to East Coast Park.

When the boys arrived, they could not wait to pitch their tents. They chose a spot near the trees as it was shady. When they had finished pitching their tents, they took a short rest. Then it was time for lunch.

After the break, the boys were divided into four groups of six. Weiming and Anwar were the leaders. Each group was given an activity. Raja's group learnt how to tie different types of knots. Andy's group learnt how to prepare a simple meal. Weiming's group learnt the ways of putting out a fire and Anwar's group learnt about jungle survival.

After another break, there was a changeover of activities and the groups had to complete all four activities by the next day. The boys found the activities interesting and they wanted a similar session another time. Mr Lim promised to organise another camp for them later in the year.

SECTION M : COMPREHENSION (5 X 2m = 10 marks)

Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow.

Today I found a turtle. Father had sent me down to collect driftwood on Rushy Bay. I had been there for half an hour or so heaping up the wood before I noticed the turtle. He was upside down on the sand. His eyes were open, unblinking. He was enormous. I looked around and there were seagulls gathering. They were silent, watching, waiting; and I knew well enough what they were waiting for. I threw pebbles at the seagulls and they flew off protesting noisily. I tried to roll the turtle over. I rocked him back and forth, and pushed with all my might. The turtle turned over but I could not possibly push that giant into the sea.

I sat down beside him on the sand. Then I had an idea. I picked a thick branch from among the driftwood I had collected and scraped out a long deep channel all the way down to the sea. "When the tide comes in and fill up the channel, you can wade out to sea," I muttered to the turtle as I dug. When I had finished, I lay down beside him, exhausted and waited for the tide. I was very excited when the tide started coming in. "You want to get back in the sea then you've got to walk! You hear me?" I shouted at the turtle as I tried to catch my breath. The turtle blinked. He tried. He honestly tried. Time and again he dug his flippers into the sand, but he just could not move himself. I wandered a distance away from him and sat down on a rock to think.

A sudden shadow fell across me. Granny May was standing behind me. "Cheer up, Laura. I think I know what the problem is. Let's give him some shrimps," Granny May said. I dug a bowl in the sand under the turtle's chin and Granny May poured her bag of shrimps into it. The turtle gobbled the shrimps up like a vulture. I crouched down and looked my turtle in the eye. "Feel better now?" I asked. He moved. The flippers dug deeper and soon he was scooping himself slowly towards the sea. Granny May and I whistled and whooped. Finally, his flippers were under water. He dipped his snout into the sea and let the water run over his head and down his neck. He went deeper into the water and with a few powerful strokes, he was gone.
