Read the passage below and answer questions 26 to 30.

Mumba looked around the stadium. It was almost deserted but it had been full of life only an hour before. As he sat forlorn on the running track, he could not help but reflect dejectedly on the incident that had taken place earlier that evening.

As he entered the stadium, Mumba heard the loud cheers as almost every one present in the stadium stood up and cheered his name. He was the record holder for his pet event, the 1500 metres. He had held the record for over two years and was the favourite to win the event as none of the other runners could match the times he had recorded in his heats and semi-finals.

Feeling confident, Mumba strode proudly to the starting line and waved to the spectators who responded by calling out his name even louder. As the cameras clicked away, Mumba put down his sling bag and got ready for the race. He removed his tracksuit, unzipped the bag and took a box out. "A brand new pair. It will do nicely," he said to himself as he admired the shoes in his hands.

Mumba was one of the most recognizable runners in the world so he had no shortage of sponsors who wanted his endorsement for their products. As Mumba did a slow jog behind the starting line, he thought, "Feels good. One of the most comfortable I've put on in a long while." Smiling confidently to himself, Mumba started his warm-up routine. Ten minutes later, the starter called all the competitors to the starting line. The race was about to begin.

As he stood in line with the other runners, Mumba said a silent prayer. Although he had won countless races, this was the most important one so far as it was his first ever appearance in the Olympics. He held his breath in anticipation of the starter's signal. As the starter gave the instructions, all the runners leaned forward, each wanting to get a head start. The pistol was fired and every single runner sprang forward instantly.

Mumba was renowned for pacing himself. He never took the lead from the start and always knew the right moment to sprint into the lead. However, he could not foresee what would happen next. At the 800 metre mark, he was ready to make his move. Out of the blue, he felt an odd sensation. He could almost feel the track under the soles of his feet. Taking a quick glance down at his shoes, he was overcome with horror. His shoes had given way! He slowed down and quickly looked around. What he saw stunned him.

Mumba was devastated, he knew that he could not run farther with the state the shoes were in. As he walked dejectedly off the track, there was a loud gasp from all his fans. They had realised what was happening only when they looked up at the huge screen in the stadium. The cameras had momentarily shifted from Mumba and the other runners to what looked like the soles of a pair of shoes lying in the middle of the track.

For each question from 26 to 30, four options are given. One of them is the correct answer. Make your choice (1, 2, 3 or 4). Shade the correct oval (1, 2, 3 or 4) on the Optical Answer Sheet (OAS). (5 marks)

26. Why was Mumba dejected over the 'incident' (line 3)?
- (1) His new pair of shoes had cost him the race.
 - (2) He had disappointed the sponsors of his shoes.
 - (3) An injury to his soles had caused him to stop running.
 - (4) All the spectators in the stadium had lost confidence in him.
27. Why was Mumba expected to win the 1500 metre race?
- (1) He was using a brand new pair of shoes.
 - (2) He knew that he would beat the other runners.
 - (3) He had endorsed the products of many sponsors.
 - (4) He had set the fastest times in the heats and semi-finals.
28. Although Mumba was the world record holder, he _____.
- (1) was doubtful if he could win the race
 - (2) was unable to win over the spectators
 - (3) had never led in any of his previous races
 - (4) had never taken part in the Olympics before
29. In line 31, 'make his move' refers to Mumba _____.
- (1) winning the race
 - (2) picking up speed
 - (3) gaining more confidence
 - (4) throwing caution to the wind
30. Which of the following statements is true?
- (1) Mumba was the defending champion in the Olympic 1500 metre race.
 - (2) Mumba had to stop running because he was disqualified from the race.
 - (3) Mumba said a prayer before the race started as he wanted to get a head start.
 - (4) Mumba's fans were taken aback when they realised why he did not complete the race.

Undoubtedly, the year-end holidays are probably the ultimate highlight for most people. Whether they spend them lounging around doing absolutely nothing or doing something useful, they are something that everyone looks forward to after a year of hard work.

Carly and her family were no different. A fortnight before Christmas last year, they decided to take a week-long trip to Indonesia. The time soon came to set off for their much-anticipated getaway. Carly could hardly contain her excitement. Not only was it her first holiday overseas, it was also her maiden voyage on a plane! Upon leaving Changi Airport in the morning, Carly and her family arrived in Bandung, Indonesia, a mere hour later.

However, when they arrived at the Bandung airport, almost immediately, Carly realised that the holiday that they had been looking forward to was fast turning into a nightmare. Their tour guide, Kamal, was not there to meet them! Their initial feelings of enthusiasm quickly began to leave them and their tour group of ten soon found themselves at a loss as to what to do.

When Kamal finally did arrive, Carly and her family had another shock as they found that he spoke very little English. It was the start of their communication breakdown. From then on, the word "understand" ceased to be in their mutual vocabulary.

First on the itinerary was Tangkuban Perahu. Carly and the other travellers were all eager to see this spectacular crater of a dormant volcano, especially after the four-hour bus journey. However, instead of letting them enjoy the panoramic view, Kamal brought them to a hotel instead where they could only catch a minute glimpse of the volcano. However, too hungry and fatigued from the long journey, they all simply had dinner and retired for the night.

The next morning, Carly and her family woke up early, full of optimism for a more successful round of sightseeing. No such luck. They ended up spending long periods on the bus, stopping only for terrible meals and at hotels at night. Truly, so much of the trip was spent riding in their automated horseless carriage. Needless to say, they all also had bad cases of food poisoning.

The travellers' complaints fell on deaf ears since Kamal did not even comprehend what they were saying. The only time any of them had any fun was when they shopped for souvenirs. Another thing that made them happy was the familiar sight of a McDonald's restaurant where they finally got a decent meal.

The whole trip was a rather miserable one and everyone only cheered up on the final day. Everyone knew they would be home that very afternoon. Carly and her family breathed a sigh of relief when they touched down at Changi Airport. Their disastrous holiday was finally over. Home had never been more inviting.

71. In line 1, why are the December holidays considered the "ultimate highlight" for most people?

72. Which two-word phrase in paragraph 2 tells us that it was the writer's first time taking a flight?

73. How did Kamal's absence at the airport upon their arrival affect Carly and the rest of her tour members?

74. In what way did the first sightseeing item turn out to be a disappointment?

75. Why did the travellers not complain or protest on their first day?

76. How was their second day of sightseeing just as unfruitful?

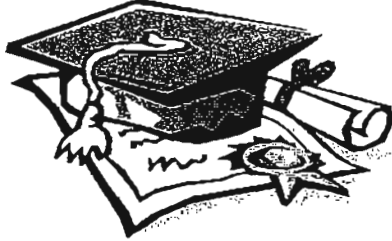

77. In line 29, what does the "automated horseless carriage" refer to?

78. In line 31, explain fully why the travellers' complaints fell on deaf ears.

79. Before the final day of their vacation, at what times did the travellers feel happy?

80. In the last paragraph, why were Carly and her family so relieved to touch down at Changi Airport?
