When Ron gave his seven-year-old son, Nick, a basketball, Nick wanted to play at once. Ron said to him, "Son, basketball is a serious game. You have to train hard before you can play it."

The boy went outside and began throwing the ball at the hoop (16) over and over. After an hour, he said, "Dad, can we play now?"

Ron said, "Show me what you can do."

Nick tried to score but he missed. He tried again and failed. "I'll never (17) succeed. Dad, I've really worked hard," he said (18) in dismay.

Ron tried to hide his concern when he said, "Remember you've trained for the past hour. (19) Focus on the marking on the backboard." The boy threw the ball again and it bounced off the backboard and landed on the edge of the hoop. Both father and son watched (20) in anticipation as the ball started falling into the hoop. Nick gave a triumphant grin.

Ron came forward and gave Nick a pat on his back.

Songkran is a water festival which takes place in Thailand. It falls on the month of April and usually lasts three days. It is one of the most important events in Thailand as it is also the traditional Thai New Year. Water play a major role in the festival. The Thai people believe that the water washes away bad luck from the previous year.

(40)

The Thai people prepare for the New Year by carrying out spring-cleaning of their homes, schools and offices. Family members will deafumertly return home to spend time with their loved ones no matter what busy they are.

(42)

(43)

Many families wake up early during Songkran and visit temples. They bring offerings such as food or listen to monks as they preach. Young people show their gratitewd and respect to their elders in a sacred ritual. This ritual involves pouring of scented water on their hands and give them new clothes. The Thai people splash water on themselves, in the hope that this praktis will bring plenty of rain in the New Year.

(44)

(46)

(47)

Many tourists which visit Thailand during this festival have the oppertunitees to watch traditional performances, taste local delicacies and take part in local sports activities. This festival offers a lot of eksaitment while welcoming the traditional Thai New Year. It is no wonder that Thais and tourists alike look forward to this special festival.

Section I: Comprehension (Open-ended) (20 marks)

Read this passage and answer questions 71 to 80 in complete sentences.

Remember to use the comprehension strategies that you have learnt to help you understand the text better.

Salva and the group of travellers had to cross the desert to get to the refugee camp. Salva had never seen anything like the desert. No plants could survive in such harsh conditions and without any trace of water. Uncle said it would take three days to cross the desert. Salva's shoes stood no chance against the hot stony desert ground. After only a few minutes, Salva could only continue his journey barefoot.

The first day in the desert felt like the longest day Salva had ever lived through. The sun was beating on him relentlessly. Each minute walking in the burning heat felt like an hour.

Thorns pierced his feet and he was left with blisters and cuts. His lips became cracked and parched. Uncle cautioned him to make the water in his water bottle last as long as possible. It was the hardest thing Salva had ever done, taking only tiny sips when his body cried out for huge gulps of thirst-quenching water.

10

The worst moment of the day happened. Salva stubbed his bare toe on a rock and his whole toenail came off. The pain was terrible. Salva tried to bite his lip to stop himself from crying out. His tears began to flow down his cheeks. Salva quickly wiped away his tears with the back of his hand and tried to walk as normally as possible.

15

Tears continued to well up in his eyes. He could not think. He could barely see. He had to slow down for the first time on the long journey. He began to lag behind the group who were moving farther and farther ahead. Fear gripped him when he saw the other travellers slowly vanishing into the horizon. What would happen to him if he was left alone in the desert? As if by magic, Uncle suddenly appeared by his side. "Salva!" he said, loud and clear. Salva lifted his head, sobs interrupted by surprise.

20

"Do you see that clump of bushes?" Uncle said, pointing. "You need to only walk there. Can you do that?"

Those bushes did not look too far. When they reached the bushes, Uncle pointed out to a heap of rocks up ahead and told Salva to walk towards the rocks. After that, he instructed Salva to walk to another heap of rocks.

Uncle continued in this way for the rest of the walk. At last, the sun began to set. Salva looked forward to the moment when the air began to get cooler. A blessing of darkness fell across the desert and it was time to rest. Salva lay on the cool sand. He feared his journey the next day and hoped for slightly less hot weather.

30

The next day was exactly like the one before. There was not a thing ahead to indicate that the group was making some progress across the desert. Salva felt like he had walked for hours but it seemed that he had stayed at exactly the same place.

Soon, one by one the men began to collapse. Salva counted nine men on the sand. One made a desperate attempt to lift his head but slumped back on the sand. As Salva watched, he realised that five of the men were completely motionless.

One of the women in the group knelt down and opened her canister of water. "What are you doing?" a man called out. "You cannot save them!"

The woman did not answer. She had tears in her eyes as she wetted a piece of cloth and began to wet the lips of one of the men on the sand.

40

"If you give them your water, you will not have enough for yourself!" the same voice shouted. "It is useless. They will die, and you will die with them!"
