I had almost lost my dearest companion to a trekking mishap. Ellie, then a one-year-old shepherd dog, was my trekking partner on that fateful trip. We were climbing up Grand Traverse Peak. After we had covered eight kilometres of the difficult climb, I was exhausted. On the other hand, Ellie, bouncing playfully behind, seemed unfazed by the strenuous exercise. As I reached the mountain top, I heard a short yelp from Ellie, but I assumed it would be seconds behind me, as it had been all morning. I snapped a photo of the majestic view for my family, called out to my dog and headed back down the trail.

Ellie was nowhere to be seen. "Ellie!" I called. "Where are you?" I felt a tickle of panic in my throat as I treaded carefully, still seeing no signs of it. Ellie was athletic, young and not easily defeated. I reasoned he must be fine.

Then, several hundred metres further down, I saw its paw prints on a strip of snow. I followed them warily until they disappeared off the edge. There was no sign of Ellie. That yelp, I realised, was Ellie's cry for help.

Cyber Wellness Day
@ Hudson Primary School
24 May 2019

Be a Cyber Wellness Champion
Learn to navigate cyberspace safely
Join us for a day of fun, meaningful activities.

About the event:

"In our school, the teachers not only want to tap on technology for teaching and learning in the classrooms, but they also want to reinforce the appropriate use of technology among you. We want to raise you to be responsible and respectful digital citizens who practise internet etiquette (netiquette). We hope that you will make smart choices online because anything posted online leaves permanent digital footprints.

For these purposes, we have a series of activities lined up for you during the Cyber Wellness Day. Class timetables will be suspended for that day. The prefects and ICT champions have come up with interesting tasks based on the theme of netiquette, which the IT Department has decided. Work together with your friends on a task and have an enjoyable and meaningful time. There are also talks given by trained counsellors on the various problems related to digital citizenship. I am sure you will gain invaluable tips on managing your internet use from these talks.

Last but not least, I would like to challenge you to approach this event with this attitude. keep an open mind, listen with your heart and feel with your eyes."

Mrs Irene Boey, Principal

"We are known as a generation of digital natives, born or raised in the age of digital technology. We are familiar with the use of computers from a young age. Sadly, we are also exposed to the dangers of cyberspace. As netizens, some of us may even have fallen prey to cyberbullying or know of friends who are victims of such. This problem is spreading like a virus — it is time for us to rally together and fight it. Silence means consent when it comes to cyberbullying. Let's learn how to stand up to it effectively. Let's take action and send a clear message that cyberbullying is not acceptable in our school. Let's make the cyberbullies among us drop their terrible acts. We have the rights and responsibilities towards cyber-security."

Section I – Comprehension Open-ended (20 marks)

Read this passage and answer questions 71 to 80.

The late afternoon sun cast long shadows around the sandy football pitch below. A crowd was waiting restlessly for a football match to begin. Beep! The whistle blew and the match kicked off!

The players kicked up particles of sand as they chased around the ball focused and oblivious to the clouds of dust swirling about them. The match was between a team from a youth prison and that of a private football club. One could easily tell the teams apart: while the prison team played barefoot, the opposing team wore football boots. However, regardless of the disadvantage, one skilful player from the prison team stood out from the rest — he was Bilia. 5

Bilia had been thrown into prison for stealing bananas and injuring the seller while trying to get away. He loved the sport and trained hard. It was a delight to watch him play; the striker was quick-footed. His best shot that afternoon was a perfect pass made to a teammate who was right in front of goal. Unfortunately, the boy was inattentive and missed the ball. It was a wasted chance. The score at half-time was a goalless draw. 10

"Keep it up, boys! Show them what you've got!" the coach for the prison team, Misu, shouted as the boys ran back onto the pitch for the second half. However, within minutes into the game, a long shot by the opposing striker caught their goalkeeper off guard. 15

"Goal!" the spectators screamed and the opposing team celebrated. Nevertheless, the prison team did not lose heart. Even though their feet were blistered and sore, they persevered and made every attempt to equalise the score. Yet, when the final whistle was blown, the match ended with only one goal. The prison team dragged their sore feet off the pitch, their T-shirts soaked in sweat and their heads hung low. 20

In the changing room, Misu tried to cheer his players up. "You've tried your best and I'm proud of you!" It was true. They did play well and had even managed to prove that people who ended up behind bars were not always good-for-nothing. 25

A professional football coach named Ricardo had watched the match with interest. "That number 27 is really talented," he thought. "He has great control of the ball and makes good strategic moves!"

The next day, Ricardo went to the prison to talk to the warden, Corporal Tanga. "I'm very impressed with your number 27 and would like to recruit him for my team," he said. 30

"Oh, you mean Bilia? He has committed very serious crimes though," Corporal Tanga replied. He thought briefly and then shouted to the guards to fetch Bilia.

A while later, Bilia stood before the men. His grey prison uniform was too big for him and he was wearing sandals made from a tyre. Corporal Tanga pointed at Ricardo and said, "Bilia, this man thinks you are some kind of football genius." 35

Bilia was surprised but he managed to smile and say, "Thank you, Sir!"

"Do you want to leave here?" asked Corporal Tanga. Bilia had never expected to be free. Now that he had the chance to, his heart was bursting with anticipation.

"Only...only if I deserve to, Sir. If you let me leave, I promise that you will never see me again, Sir!" answered Bilia.

40

Corporal Tanga nodded, "Yes, I believe everyone should be given a second chance." He was confident that Bilia would keep his promise. He wished Bilia well and sent him to pack his belongings while he continued to speak with Ricardo.
