Read the passage below and answer questions 31 to 35.

Some people refer to Caucasian Americans and African Americans as “pink” people and “brown” people respectively. While these phrases are more accurate than the usual “white” people and “black” people, the American people are more comfortable with the latter phrases. This is because people choose to divide the population with labels like “white” and “black”

5

Many African Americans feel that they are viewed as second-class citizens, as compared to their first-class fellow citizens who are “white”. This belief probably stems from the fact that many poor neighbourhoods in America are populated mainly by African Americans.

American ghettos, which are almost always black neighbourhoods, have always had crime and violence. But crime and violence were much worse in the 19th century slums, which were almost all white. The murder rate in Boston in the 19th century was about three times what it was in the 20th century. All the black riots of the 1960s put together did not kill as many people as the number of people killed in one white riot in 1863.

The meaning of the term “race riot” has been watered down in recent times to include strong and angry protests about issues close to the heart. In the 19th century, it was much uglier. Thousands of members of one “race” invaded the neighbourhood of another “race” to maim, murder and burn – and both these races were typically made up of “white” people. Today’s riots involving “black” people hardly result in any bloodshed and buildings are left more or less intact.

20

Many black neighbourhoods are overcrowded and ridden with dirt and disease. But in 19th century New York, there were ten to thirty thousand children with no homes. These children slept under bridges and huddled against buildings to shelter themselves from the elements.

25

In conclusion, violence, poverty and destroyed lives are problems Americans have faced throughout history. At each point in history, these problems have afflicted a different group of people. But these problems should never be accepted – whether they involve “black” people or “white” people. Therefore, instead of wondering if a problem is a “white” problem or a “black” problem, we should gather our resources together, solve these problems and move forward towards a better age.

30

Based on “Pink and Brown People” by Thomas Sowell

For each question from 31 to 35, four options are given. One of them is the correct answer. Make your choice (1, 2, 3 or 4). Shade the correct oval (1, 2, 3 or 4) on the Optical Answer Sheet. (5 x 2 marks)

31. The terms "white" people and "black" people refer to _____.

- (1) "pink" people and "brown" people
- (2) affectionate nicknames that Americans use
- (3) people with white skin and people with black skin
- (4) labels that Americans prefer using to describe the two different races

32. African Americans are viewed as second-class citizens because _____.

- (1) they all come from poor families
- (2) Caucasian Americans are usually rich
- (3) there are many poor black neighbourhoods in America
- (4) first-class status is reserved only for Caucasian Americans

33. Race riots these days involve _____.

- (1) much bloodshed and destroyed buildings
- (2) two races invading each other's neighbourhoods
- (3) maiming, murdering and burning an entire neighbourhood
- (4) people angrily protesting against issues that affect them

34. Currently, crime and violence in American ghettos _____.

- (1) consist mostly of murders
- (2) are three times worse than in 20th century Boston
- (3) kill more people than in the 1863 white riot
- (4) take place less often as compared to the 19th century white slums

35. What does the writer mean when he says "But these problems should never be accepted"? He means that _____.

- (1) effort has to be made to reduce violence and poverty
- (2) homeless children should be given warm shelters to sleep in
- (3) all "white" and "black" problems should be solved
- (4) black neighbourhoods should be free of dirt and disease

A study conducted by British scientists revealed that plastic can be a threat to the seas. Plastic debris dumped into the oceans (36) _____ decades is breaking up into microscopic particles. These particles are cropping up everywhere, (37) _____ beaches to deep ocean sediments. This phenomenon has consequences (38) _____ are just beginning to unfold.

Widespread littering has led to (39) _____ steady accumulation of plastic fragments at sea. "It's cause (40) _____ concern rather than alarm," Dr Thompson, a scientist, said. "What we throw away doesn't disappear; (41) _____ comes back one way or another."

The researchers collected sediments from beaches around England. They examined an additional 17 beaches (42) _____ looked at plankton samples collected regularly since the 1960s, (43) _____ British shores. According to (44) _____, plastic turned up in small fragments and granules. Even "biodegradable" plastics leave behind plastic fragments and (45) _____ cleaning agents contain abrasive plastic bits. The scientists plan to educate each of us about our social responsibility.

Suddenly her parents seemed to apeer out of thin air. They were barely

Kura was well-known throughout the nine villages. His fame rested on the fact that he was the greatest wrestler since 'Amal the Cat'. At eighteen, Kura had brought honour to his (56) _____ by defeating Amal, who had been unbeaten for seven years.

On the day of that unforgettable match, the drums (57) _____, the flutes sang and the (58) _____ held their breath. Amal was wily, but Kura was as (59) _____ as a fish in water. Every nerve and every muscle stood out on their taut bodies, and one almost heard them stretching to breaking point. That was many years ago, and during this time, Kura's (60) _____ had grown like a bush-fire in the jungle.

Kura was clearly (61) _____ out for great things. He was young, but he had already been recognised as the greatest (62) _____ in the nine villages, was wealthy, and was one of the most revered men of his (63) _____. He should have been a very contented man, if not for his two dark (64) _____.

His first skeleton in the cupboard was his father. Noka, who had (65) _____ ten years ago. In his day, Noka's wife and children had barely (66) _____ to eat, thanks to his lazy and imprudent ways. As soon as Noka understood what Binoy was driving (71) _____, he burst out laughing. His (72) _____ was shocked, and sat speechless. (73) _____ to say, Binoy did not get his money back. When Noka died, he was heavily in debt and Kura was utterly (74) _____ of him.

Kura's second skeleton was his terrible stammer, which did not allow him to get his (75) _____ out fast enough.

Fortunately for Kura, he was so revered that he did not have to speak much - a mere nod or a stern glare was all it took to send scurrying villagers to do his bidding.

Read the passage below carefully and answer questions 81 to 90.

Miss Fisher began the day by reading us a story about cats. By the time Mrs. Cat called the drugstore for an order of chocolate malted mice, the class was wriggling like a bucketful of Catawba worms. Miss Fisher seemed unaware that her class, most of whom had never left the farms on which they were born, were completely uninterested. The ragged, denim-shirted and flour sack-skirted first graders were immune to imaginative literature. 5

Then she chose me to read the alphabet that she had printed on the blackboard. As I read the alphabet, a faint line appeared between her eyebrows; and after making me read most of our English textbook and the stock-market quotations from The Mobile Register aloud, she discovered that I was literate and looked at me with more than faint distaste. 10

"Young lady, you go home and tell your father not to teach you any more. You may be able to read, but I want all my students to follow my way of teaching reading!" she instructed. I mumbled that I was sorry and retired, meditating upon my crime. 15

At lunch-time, Miss Fisher asked everybody who went home for lunch to raise their hands. The town children did so, and she looked us over. Then she asked everyone who brought lunch to school to put it on their desks. Everyone did, except Walter Robinson.

"Did you forget your lunch this morning?" asked Miss Fisher. 20

Walter looked straight ahead. I saw a muscle jump in his skinny jaw

Miss Fisher went to her desk and opened her purse. "Here's a dollar for your lunch. You can pay me back tomorrow."

Walter shook his head. "No, thank you, Ma'am," he drawled softly, but firmly, his head held high. Impatience crept into Miss Fisher's voice as she repeated her offer twice more. 25

Walter Robinson did not forget his lunch -- his family simply could not afford it. He had none today nor would he have any tomorrow or the next day. Miss Fisher was shaming him. Saved by the bell, the class filed out for lunch.

"Come home to lunch with me, Walter," I grinned at him. His face brightened and his eyes lit up. 30

Walter piled food on his plate and asked for some syrup. He poured syrup on his vegetables and meat, and would probably have poured it into his milk glass as well had I not told him that syrup did not go with vegetables, meat and milk. He quickly put his hands in his lap and ducked his head. 35

It was then that Mrs. Taylor, our housekeeper, requested my presence in the kitchen. She was furious.

"Anybody who sets foot in this house is a guest! Don't you let me catch you remarking on their ways like you are so high and mighty!"

When I returned to school, I spent the rest of the day hating Mrs. Taylor. 40

Read the passage and answer questions 31 to 35.

Cyril was simply too shocked to express himself properly. For nearly an hour, Famara and Moustapha struggled to make sense of Cyril's garbled words. Frustrated by their puzzled expressions, Cyril finally held out his hands and made the gesture of holding a steering wheel. They got it – he had come by car!

Helping Cyril to his feet, Famara and Moustapha walked him to where he had 5 parked his car, an old Opel. Overcome by fear and shock, Cyril sat in the driver's seat, head against the wheel.

"Come on," Famara and Moustapha said. "We'll help you. Drive slowly."

Cyril crept out of Saint-Quentin onto the main road north. Fifteen kilometres 10 later, he pulled up in front of a high stone house in the little farm village of Nauroy.

When Nadine Lenoir answered the doorbell, she stood, gaping, at the sight.

"Joel, come quick!" she cried. "Cyril's back, with two black boys. They're all dripping wet."

The Lenoirs had moved from Saint-Quentin to Nauroy a few years earlier to rent a bigger house in the village. They needed the space.<sup>3</sup> In addition to Cyril, 15 Nadine's brother, Maurice, had been living in the household since their parents were killed in a car crash.

Joel supported all of them on his modest bus driver's salary. They were comfortable enough if they watched their budget, and Joel was not a man to complain. He and Nadine had already seen too much of death to forget how 20 precious life was: after Joel's younger brother committed suicide, the couple had lost a toddler of their own to an infection.

Now, with Cyril still shaking with fear, Famara and Moustapha filled in the details of what had happened. Joel was flooded with a mixture of dread and relief at how close tragedy had come yet again. In addition, he was also filled with 25 immeasurable gratitude.

"Here," he said, offering Famara and Moustapha all the money he could find; two hundred dollars for each of them. To his surprise, the young strangers refused.

Read the passage below and answer questions 81 to 90.

The sun had just risen. The annual marathon in my town is usually held during a neat wave. My job was to follow the runners in an ambulance to render medical attention. The driver and I were in an air-conditioned ambulance behind approximately one hundred athletes waiting for the race to start.

"We're supposed to stay behind the last runner, so drive slowly," I said to the driver, Doug, as we began to creep forward. 5

"Let's just hope the last runner is fast!" He laughed.

As they began to pace themselves, the runners were running way ahead. It was then that my eyes were drawn to a woman in blue running shorts and a baggy white T-shirt. She clenched her fists tightly. She pushed herself forward, ready to begin the race. 10

"Doug, look!"

We knew we were already watching our "last runner." Her feet were turned in, yet her left leg was turned out. Her legs were so crippled and bent that it seemed impossible for her to be able to walk, let alone run a marathon. 15

Doug and I watched in silence as she slowly moved forward. We did not utter a word. We would move forward slightly, then stop and wait for her to gain some distance. Then we would slowly move a little more. As I watched her struggle to put one foot in front of the other, I found myself cheering for her and urging her forward. I wanted her to stop, and at the same time, I prayed that she would not. 20

Finally she was the only runner left in sight. Tears streamed down my face as I sat on the edge of my seat and watched with awe, amazement and even reverence as she pushed forward with sheer determination through the last miles.

When the finish line came into sight, trash lay everywhere and the cheering crowds had long gone home. Yet, standing straight and ever so proud waited a lone man. He was holding one end of a ribbon of crepe paper tied to a post. She slowly crossed through, leaving both ends of the paper fluttering behind her. There was a look of triumph in her before she collapsed and lay limp on the ground. 25

Hurray! She made it. Without a moment's delay, I dashed forward and rendered aid to my first and only casualty for the day. 30

I do not know this woman's name, but that day she became part of my life -- a part I often depend on. For her, it wasn't about beating the other runners, or winning a trophy, it was about finishing what she had set out to do, no matter what. When I think things are too difficult or too time consuming, or I get those I-just-can't-do-it feeling, I always think of the last runner. Then I would realize how easy the task before me really is. 35
