SECTION A: GRAPHIC STIMULUS (5 x 1 = 5 marks)

Study the following advertisement and answer questions 1 to 5.

CELEBRATE EARTH DAY WITH OUR Feathered Friends

Hey kids! April 22 is Earth Day and it's time to learn how you can help to save our planet. Pick up tips to protect Mother Nature and engage in eco-friendly activities. Fly away today, the celebration is just starting!

Every Day Can Be Earth Day!

Tip 1: Prevent waste before it is produced.

E.g. Avoid using disposable paper plates & plastic ware.

Tip 2: Find new uses for objects that have outgrown their original use.

E.g. Line pet litter with old newspapers.

Tip 3: Buy products that have recycled content in their packaging.

E.g. Check labels before purchasing products.

Tip 4: Be a Wildlife Reserve volunteer ranger and do your part for wildlife conservation.

Bird of the Month Secretary Bird

Appearance

Instantly recognizable by a crest of quill-like feathers on its eagle-like head, with a hooked beak and legs that resemble a crane's.

Habitat

Non-migratory in nature, endemic to South Africa. Commonly found in open grasslands and savannas of the sub-Saharan.

Fun Fact

The crest of long quill-like feathers lends the bird the appearance of a secretary with quill pens tucked behind his ear, a practice of 19th century secretaries.

Earth Day Art Competition

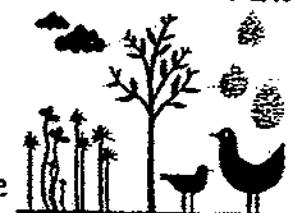

Show your love for Mother Nature the artistic way. You could be one of the lucky winners to walk away with a Bird Park Hamper worth $100.

Date : 19 Apr 2009, Sun

Time : 9:45 – 11 am

Venue: Pools Amphitheatre

Art paper will be provided. Participants are required to bring their own colouring materials.

Feather Run 2009

Come join us for an adrenaline-filled event.

Date : 19 Apr 2009, Sun

Time : 8:00 – 10 am

Due to overwhelming response, registration has been extended!

Have A Flap-tulous Secretary's Day

April 22 is also Secretary's Day and we are calling all secretaries and administrative professionals. From 20-26 April, enjoy 30% off admission tickets, 20% off a Secretary's Day 3-course meal and 20% off housebrand retail merchandise!
Terms & Conditions apply.*

For each question from 1 to 5, four options are given. One of them is the correct answer. Make your choice (1, 2, 3 or 4). Shade the correct oval (1, 2, 3 or 4) on the Optical Answer Sheet.

Section E: VOCABULARY CLOZE (5 x 1 = 5 marks)

For each question from 21 to 25, choose the word(s) closest in meaning to the underlined words. Shade the correct oval (1, 2, 3 or 4) on the Optical Answer Sheet.

A big greyish, rounded bulk, the size perhaps, of a bear, was rising slowly and (21) painfully out of the cylinder. As it (22) bulged up and caught the light, it glistened like wet leather. Two large dark-coloured eyes were regarding me steadfastly. It was rounded, and had, one might say, a face. There was a mouth under the eyes; the brim of which shook and dropped saliva. The body heaved and throbbed.

Those who have never seen a Martian, can (23) scarcely imagine the strange horror of their appearance. The peculiar V-shaped mouth with its pointed upper lip, the absence of brow ridges and a chin beneath the wedge-like lower lip, the noisy breathing of the lungs in a strange atmosphere, the (24) evident heaviness and painfulness of movement – above all, the extraordinary intensity of the immense eyes – ended in an effect (25) akin to nausea.

Section F: COMPREHENSION (5 x 1 = 5 marks)

Read the passage below and answer questions 26 to 30.

For each question from 26 to 30, four options are given. One of them is the correct answer. Make your choice (1, 2, 3 or 4). Shade the correct oval (1, 2, 3 or 4) on the Optical Answer Sheet.

It was a mostly sunny Friday afternoon with billowy clouds floating by. I was golfing in Durham with four of my co-workers. We were on the fifth hole when it started to drizzle. We decided to get under a shelter to wait it out. We were standing there, just kind of harassing each other the way we always did, just talking nonsense. I remember the air had a sweet ozone smell to it. That was the last thing I recalled before the strike. 5.

When the bolt hit me, I was absolutely frozen, just as cold as I have ever been in my entire life, but then part of me was incredibly hot, too. I saw these red flashing lights, and I kept thinking, "It's a fire truck! It's a fire truck!" Then there was the most incredible noise that I had ever heard. The sound was so loud that I honestly could not hear anything. Evidently, it was so loud that it blew the cilia in the ear completely flat. 10

I felt as if I had been slammed between two dumpsters. It was like every case of the flu you have ever had, at one time. My arms and my legs and my hands all felt as if they weighed 5000 pounds. Every bit of my body was just in absolute pain. It was such a dull ache, and so sharp at the same time; it was like everything from a migraine 15 to a hangover to needles being stuck in every millimetre of your body. My hair hurt, my eyelashes hurt; I could feel it when my hair moved, when the wind blew across me.

The lightning bolt had gone down along a tree next to us, taken off some branches on its way, and then hit the overhang of the shelter, putting a huge hole in it. Then it went through Terry. He was struck through the top of his head, and it came out his 20 knee. It killed him immediately. Then it shot out from the ground and hit the rest of us. It went through me and left an exit wound in my head that needed eight staples.

Now I have a hard time with addition and subtraction. I can handle some fairly complex math involving trigonometry and calculus, but do not ask me to add. The doctors say there is nothing wrong with me, but I know there is. Figuring out how to fix 25 it, that is about like shooting mosquitoes with a shotgun.

Adapted from What It Feels Like...edited by A.J. Jacobs

26. A lightning strike seemed unlikely that afternoon as the weather condition was _____.
- (1) clear
 - (2) overcast
 - (3) breezy and hazy
 - (4) windy and cloudy
27. The writer and his friends sought shelter to avoid the _____.
- (1) drizzle
 - (2) red flashing lights
 - (3) sweet ozone smell
 - (4) thunder and lightning
28. The writer was _____ by the resounding noise when he was struck by the bolt of lightning.
- (1) frozen
 - (2) deafened
 - (3) heated up
 - (4) thrown off
29. The word 'it' in line 17 refers to the _____.
- (1) wind that blew into the writer
 - (2) lightning that had struck the writer
 - (3) pain in the writer's hair and eyelashes
 - (4) migraine that the writer was experiencing
30. Which one of these statements is true?
- (1) The lightning bolt killed Terry instantaneously.
 - (2) Only the writer and Terry were struck by lightning.
 - (3) The doctors could not solve the complex mathematical problems.
 - (4) The writer could perform all mathematical tasks after the incident.

Imagine putting together the world's largest jigsaw puzzle. This is what scientists (31) reassemble the fossil bones of dinosaurs must do when they want to find out what the creatures looked like. Fossilized bones are embedded in solid rock. The first thing scientists must do is to get the bones out of the rocks without damaging (32). This task requires enormous patience. hammers, drills and chisels are commonly used in breaking up the rocks, sound waves can also be used. Sometimes each set of the fossilized skeletons (33) preserved in its original position. This position shows scientists exactly (34) to reassemble it. At other times, it becomes a guessing game to decide what goes (35) when various parts of a dinosaur fossil are missing. (36) the difficulty of the task, the scientists persevere. (37) particularly exciting find occurred in 1978 when fossilized dinosaur eggs, (38) babies and several nests were found. The dinosaur nests were not made of sticks and straw. (39) dinosaurs were land animals, their nests were made of dirt hollowed out (40) a bowl shape. The nest found was three-feet deep and held about twenty eggs.

Contrary to common belief, Orville and Wilbur Wright were not the first to launch the earliest successful flight into the air.

About 120 years _____ them, two French brothers, Etienne and Joseph Montgolfier, did exactly that in 1783. Indeed, some people must _____ thought the two to be full of hot air when they _____ their plan to send a sheep, a duck and a rooster into the sky.

The two paper-makers had recognized the simple principle of aerodynamics that hot air trapped inside a lightweight vessel _____ the vessel to rise. They made a series of huge round paper balloons with a fire pot hung in a basket beneath each one _____ heat the air. At that time, the king of France had decreed that no human being could ride in the Montgolfier's balloon, so the first passengers were _____. The flight went perfectly.

Early balloons had a couple of disadvantages. First, it was impossible to control direction. A balloon's flight path was determined by the direction the wind _____ was blowing. To solve this _____, motors were attached to the balloons. The motors turned small propellers _____ gave pilots some ability to steer the balloon.

_____ the round shape of a balloon did not work well for directional flight.

Section K (20 marks)

Read the passage below and answer questions 71 to 80.

We walked onwards, higher up the side of the hill. At last, the boy stopped and said he had seen the snake nearby. We dumped our equipment and each of us took a different path through the bush searching for the creature. It seemed a hopeless task. With the tangle of creepers around the branches of the trees, I could not have seen the snake even if it was in front of my eyes.

Suddenly, I heard the old man calling excitedly. I rushed to him quickly. He was standing at the foot of a tree and pointing towards the branches above. A giant snake was looped over one of the branches about thirty feet above the ground. This complicated things for me. My 'snake-catching instruction manual' had no mention of how to deal with giant snakes when they were in trees.

Making a quick decision, I swung myself up the tree with my 'chopping' knife. Bracing my back against the trunk behind me, I faced the branch around which the snake had coiled itself. Then with hurried blows of my knife, I began cutting through the base of the branch.

As the branch shook beneath my knife the snake lifted its head towards me and hissed. One of its coils began slithering smoothly over the branch in my direction. I knew I had to redouble my efforts. The branch creaked and slowly hinged downwards. With a final blow, it fell clear, carrying the python with it. The snake landed with a crash close by the boy and the old man.

"Mendjalankau!" I roared frantically to them. However, they just looked blankly at me. There was a clump of bamboo nearby. I saw the snake sliding towards it. We would never catch it if it succeeded in hiding itself among the massive bases of the bamboo stems. Incensed at the thought of losing the snake, I yelled at my two helpers again. Instead of helping me, they scrambled to help Charles, the cameraman, with his equipment.

Desperately I jumped to the ground, seized a sack and ran after the snake. It was so intent on reaching the bamboo that it took no notice of me. I reached it just as its head entered the bamboo. Snatching its tail, I jerked it backwards and threw the sack over its head.

Gripping the snake by the scruff of its neck with one hand and grabbing its tail with my other hand, I stood up in triumph. It was at this moment that the boy at last decided to come to my aid. He arrived just in time to receive a jet of fluid all over his sarong. The old man sat down and laughed until tears ran down his cheeks. His laughter was infectious. With the task completed, the absurdity of the whole situation finally hit me. I could not help but join in the merry laughter.
